

The Transition Planning Process

Transition planning for students with disabilities is essential for preparing them for life beyond school. It is a comprehensive process where the student's future vision is central. This process is all about the student, highlighting strengths and aiming for successful outcomes. Coordinating transition services and activities facilitates this journey. By following the steps below each year, students can move closer to achieving their future goals. For more information about transition planning, check out CTI's free, online course - Fundamentals of Transition Planning.

